In the year 2045, cell phones have advanced to being chip implants in the human body. For 10 years there has been no problem with this technology. Now a team of software programmers called Hakk5 have figured out that these implants can be hacked to control human beings. A series of successful experiments on mice has proved that this can be made possible for humans as well. Being the head of Hakk5, you decide to that you can use this power to make the world a better place.

Come up with the story line for 3 video game levels where:

Level 1: You have to find more raw material to make this possible on a global scale

Level 2: You build the controlling servers, but the Sacred Guardians of Man- an underground cult that claims that their mission is to protect man- are trying to stop you from pulling the lever.

Level 3: The Sacred Guardians succeed and destroy your central servers, but you discover that they have a similar machine of their own and have their own plans. You have to now invade their base and take over their machine, before they use it.
